

- ◆ Images work better than Videos. Users on Twitter tweet images 361% more than they tweet videos. Perhaps an even better indication of how well images do in comparison with videos is to look at their other statistical highlights, wherein Images get retweeted 128% more than Videos. Another interesting standout is how popular humor is on Twitter. The majority of Images that are tweeted are inclined to be 'funny'. Even the major brands mentioned earlier (Paddy Power, Betfair) prefer to use lighthearted comedy to keep their followers entertained.
- ◆ Text works better than Images. Surprised? That is because this comes with an important caveat – that around 60% of text-based tweets contain links. In general, text based tweets make up greater than 90% of the total content there is, and it seems that the best way to drive traffic to your account, or corresponding company is to tweet with links. An odd trend that popped up was that tweets with the URL in the middle get retweeted 26% more than tweets with the URL at the beginning or at the end of the tweet. Precisely why this is the case is a little unclear, but since the data says this, best to include your link in the middle of your tweet.
- ◆ How-to articles are a favourite. This is counter-intuitive to the assumption that tweets that document everyday life are the most popular. Recent times have seen that list-based articles are retweeted up to 3 times the number that a regular text based article is. This has led to the immense popularity of websites such as Buzzfeed that have taken it on to themselves to sum up all of the human experience in how-to articles, and top 10 lists. A side note: It appears that tweets about a luxurious lifestyle are the most popular in the non-list category. This may not be the most useful bit of advice for most people who are yet to obtain said lifestyle, but here you go, anyway.
- ◆ Quotes performed better than Questions. On the surface, this isn't surprising. What is remarkable is that it was found that accounts that tweet quotes had almost 50% more followers than accounts that tweet anything else.
- ◆ Twitter is filled with automated accounts that quote famous philosophers, writers, actors, directors, etc. Pretty much any popular culture figure with a suitable following most likely has a quote account associated with them.
- ◆ On the flip side, Questions generated around 10 times the replies that a Quote did. Depending on what your aim is, you could either generate