

OF LINKEDIN, GOOGLE+ AND TUMBLR

They may not be massive, but managing these social feeds is still important to attract niche followers

While the art of social media management is tough to nail in one go, it is conventional wisdom to never put all your eggs in one basket. Though one might be tempted to stick to more popular and trending platforms such as Facebook and Instagram, a targeted and effective management strategy would cover all bases and work with other networks that provide just as much coverage for different use cases.

In this article, we'll work through the other networks that you should be putting on top of your priority list, especially if you feel you're not being able to leverage much from your current strategy.

LinkedIn

LinkedIn is a business-oriented social networking service which is mainly used for professional networking, used mainly by professionals looking to expand their networking circles, while in search for strong contacts
