

LinkedIn is a business or professional social network

1. The key to getting found in LinkedIn and Google searches is a complete and well tuned Profile and Company page. To start, the right keywords should appear on your profile page, with relevant skills being highlighted. To decide what to highlight, you can picture what terms' Google search you'd like to be featured in, and start by mentioning those more frequently on your LinkedIn page. For Company pages, the equivalent task is to build on the "products and services" part of the profile. For the marketer making the most of it, a LinkedIn company page can feature rich, tightly controlled content about a business including its products, services specialties and more. This kind of SEO never goes waste.
2. A great tool for a more reliable and stronger looking Profile or Company page would be to ask for a minimum of three recommendations, with a bulleted list of your skills, strengths and services that made the job one well done.
3. Increase your first connections in order to turn up at the top of LinkedIn search results, and build on relations with connections with frequent networking.
4. Companies should leverage the power of status updates available to them.