

them into categories and name them with appropriate titles and hashtags. This will help ensure a less cluttered and more powerful social strategy.

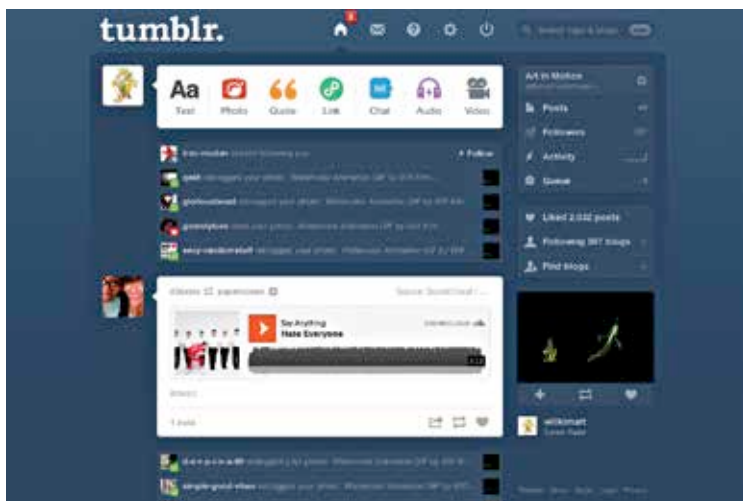

A good piece of advice would be to treat your Tumblr page less as one meant for marketing and one that has a more personal touch. Treating your Tumblr blog like your personal blog, when you are, in fact, trying to cultivate a business or brand, will help ensure the authenticity is not lost. Users on Tumblr are fiercely protective of the non-commercial and creative space, and look at straight-out marketing gimmicks as cheap, which might end up being disastrous for your image. A unique trend found on Tumblr is that of humorous and witty posts going viral, especially posts keeping up with trending memes and tropes. It works well to create such viral posts and content to help market your brand.

Tumblr is a newcomer to the world of advertising. While paid posts have been the norm on many other platforms, Tumblr has only recently hopped onto the bandwagon. For users and companies in the under-25 segment, who are willing to shell out a few extra bucks at nominal rates, Tumblr can provide unparalleled returns.

Currently, Tumblr offers four separate ad products:
