

11. Mention

Mention is a tool that monitors literally millions of sources online-in no less than 42 languages. Your brand mentions, no matter where they happen-news sites, blogs, web pages, social networks or forums- you can be sure that you can keep track of them using Mention. In addition to monitoring your team's actions, you can also share alerts with them as also assign tasks. Report-generation is pretty straightforward with Mention whereas getting information regarding the brand mentions over a specified period of time is easy.

Pro(s):

Report generation in useful formats

Con(s):

Identifying relevant sites to scrawl could be tricky

12. Twitonomy

Twitonomy is one of the most useful tools if you want to get some really deep insights about your brand's Twitter account. Not only that, by adding your competitor's Twitter handles you can get valuable information about their activities as well. Details regarding your Twitter lists, your followers and what you follow, the most popular tweets that rose from your account, engagement statistics...these are just some of the insights that you get with Twitonomy. The buck doesn't stop there though: you can also track Twitter conversations based on lists, users and hashtags. Also, the information represented in a graphical format is accessible.
