

16. Google Alerts

If you are new to the entire SMM space, setting up a Google Alerts should be at the top of your priority list. The idea behind this is simple enough- whenever a new content related to your brand comes up, or whenever a mention of the brand or the competition, industry leaders etc. happen in the internet, Google Alerts will let you know without much delay. E-mail notifications will be sent straight to your inbox regarding latest mentions/content regarding your topic of interest in news sites, forums, blogs etc.

Pro(s):

Provides a great entry point to SMM using a digital tool

Con(s):

The insights may be rather basic

17. Nimble

Nimble is one of the best contacts manager tools available. It integrates beautifully with the social profiles of all your contacts. By syncing your contacts with this tool, it becomes easier for you not just to stay connected to your network but also to increase the following on your social accounts.

Pro(s):

Good integration with social profiles of contacts

Con(s):

It still comes across as a handicap that the tool doesn't afford great insights into your social account use

18. Sprout Social

Sprout Social is a useful tool since it generates reports for multiple social accounts as well as displaying social content and keyword searches both in a single stream. Content for all your accounts can be scheduled easily using a simple publishing system in the tool. Also, the mobile app enables you to manage the social messages while on the go. The social platforms that Sprout Social support include Facebook, LinkedIn, Google+ and Twitter.
