

Pro(s):

Rather comprehensive tool for multiple accounts

Con(s):

Limited number of social platforms are supported

19. AgoraPulse

This social media management toolkit is for multiple platforms-Twitter, Instagram and Facebook to be precise. And it can be quite useful as it supports monitoring, CRM and one-click as well as contest applications and customizable ppt reports. With AgoraPulse all of social content are channelled into an inbox. Not only that, accounts are synched in real time while at the same time retaining old conversations and related data from followers.

Pro(s):

Reports including very useful metrics

Con(s):

Very limited number of social platforms supported

20. Sendible

Supporting over 30 social media networks, the services provided by Sendible include those for managing messages and social content, accounts/profiles, social contacts, enabling content discovery, managing blog content and promoting the same, raising engagement as well as monitoring multiple social platforms. A rather comprehensive social management tool there's also a white label version of Sendible which is meant for marketing agencies.

Pro(s):

Expansive set of features

Con(s):

Interface isn't intuitive

Well, no one is going to say there's a dearth in tools to assist the digital marketer of today. And judging by the number of apps and solutions that come up in almost every sector on a daily basis, it's only safe to assume that there'll be even more coming your way. And when it comes to choosing the right one for you, two things matter the most-your requirements and whether the features offered by a solution support those requirements. The list of apps and solutions given here, hopefully will help you make an informed decision. 