

for their distinct bass heavy and yet ultra sharp sound signature (and a hint of nostalgia too).

Price: ₹802

Evidson AudioSport W6

Overall for the asking price (currently sub-1k on Amazon) the Evidson AudioSport W6 are a worthy purchase for anyone looking for good quality audio at a low price point, not just for sports usage but even your regular day-to-day scenarios.

Price: ₹999

Brainwavz Omega

There is a sharpness to the Omega that makes even the Cowon EM1 sound pretty warm in comparison. The pure sound output of the Omega is slightly superior to the EM1 overall. And therefore between the old favourite Cowon EM1 and the Omega, we'd recommend the Omega. It's the end of an era.

Price: ₹999

Sennheiser CX213

Built upon the very popular Sennheiser CX180, the CX213 offer better noise attenuation and wider frequency response over the CX180. They also have better bass performance.

Price: ₹999

Cowon EM1

The Cowon EM1 has been our go-to recommendation in the budget space for nearly two years now. It got knocked out from this top spot only recently, but it's still a good headphone if you can find it. A total workhorse, the EM1 can take some rough handling. What the headphone lacks in terms of precision it makes up in comfort and isolation. The fit and isolation is one of the best we've seen. If you can get your hands on one