

(since they frequently go out of stock everywhere), they're a perfect balance between value and performance.

Price: ₹1149

Cowon EK2

The EK2 is your weapon of choice if you have a bit more money to spend and are looking for an upgrade over the old favourite EM1. You'll find that the EK2 differs slightly in terms of its sound signature. The EK2 is sharper and at the same time provides a better seal than the EM1. It's also more sensitive, so you get more volume per unit of input power.

Price: ₹1,299

Brainwavz Delta

If you are looking for a budget in-ear headphone it would be a gross travesty if you don't consider the Brainwavz Delta. Our favourites in this space so far have been the Cowon EK2 and EM1 but the Delta promises to dislodge them from this pedestal they've been occupying for far too long. The Brainwavz Delta delivers better bass, does detail equally well, and brings with it a host of accessories. If you spot a deal on these don't think twice; just click the buy button already.

Price: ₹1,799

SoundMAGIC E10S

At first glance they appear to be an exact replica of the legendary E10 but they're not. There's a small change in headphone's wiring – a switch near the headphone jack that makes it compatible with a number of smartphone variants. And unlike the E10, there's no on-cable volume control, instead there's just a single toggle. The sound reproduction is crystal clear as expected but is a little warmer than the E10M. The

