

COMMUNICATION PROTOCOLS

When devices “talk” your home becomes smarter. But which communication protocols are most suited for your home? Here we give you input.

From the days of hand gestures, smoke signals and cave paintings, communication in the world has come a long way. So much so that it's evolved to communication between humans and machines rather than just between humans. We are now at an age where we are witnessing and facilitating an even greater degree of communication between machines.

That last one is particularly significant when it comes to home automation. For effective communication amongst the devices that make your home