

SERVICES IN DETAIL

Angular's equivalent of Javascript objects, services are constructor functions. Here's all you need to know about them

Services in their simplest sense, are basically functions (or objects really) in Angular that perform a non - view related task. Any logic that is not bound to or directly interacts with the view elements should not reside in a component. They should be externalized to a service that should then be used to get the required functionality. This