

So, if you are a daily user of YouTube and have a channel on it, you already are a YouTuber. But there's a difference between a YouTuber and a successful YouTuber. So let's move on to the next question.

Youtube has a user base of more than 1.3 billion with an estimated 300 hours of videos being uploaded every minute.

So how much do these YouTubers earn?

We live in times when social media can help decide who will become the President of one of the most powerful country on the planet and everyone is probably just one viral video away from getting famous. YouTube has given rise to a new breed of celebrities, the one who got world famous from their YouTube videos. Let's take a look at some of the most famous YouTubers from India and around the world, and check out how much money they are making through their channels.

• PewDiePie

Probably the most famous YouTuber, and a name that tops every 'YouTube millionaire' list you've come across on the internet, PewDiePie is a 27-year old Swede who started his channel way back in 2010 and posted videos with funny commentary while he played various games. Probably, the first and biggest YouTube celeb, Pewdiepie dropped out of college to pursue a full time career as a YouTuber. In his early days, he used to supplement his income by working at a hot dog stand. But things changed fast. He became the most subscribed user on YouTube, only 3 years after starting his channel on 15th August 2013, and since then has held on to that title. He currently has more than 52 million subscribers on YouTube and an estimate put his ad sales revenue in the year 2016 at more than $15.5 million (over ₹105.7 crores). If that wasn't enough, he made it to Time magazine's "The World's 100 most influential People" list.

• HolaSoyGerman

Started by German Garmendia, the channel is not only the largest spanish-speaking channel, but also one of the most subscribed channels on the whole of YouTube with more than 30 million subscribers right now. His first run of success came with a series of videos titled 'Las Cosas Obvias De La Vida'