

which translates to ‘The obvious things of life’ and has him showing different and often times funny approaches to various everyday problems in life. He makes around $5.5 million every year.

- Smosh

Smosh is one of the earliest hits of the phenomenon that YouTube has been. Started by Ian Hecox and Anthony Padilla, two friends, the channel currently has more than 22 million followers and an estimated net worth of $11.8 million. Their videos consist of them and their friends making parodies of various famous and popular movies, games and TV shows. They also created the niche which led to a number of future YouTubers following in their path and posting similar contents but few able to match or surpass their success.

- TheFineBros

The brother duo jumped onto the YouTube bandwagon early and found huge success. They started the trend of “reaction videos” with their series of videos where they recorded people’s reaction while watching random trailers, videos or movies. With more than 14 million subscribers, their estimated net worth is $8.5 million.

- Jenna Marbles

With more than 16 million subscribers, she is the most followed female YouTuber. Her videos are generally about the life of “Young millennial women” which are funny, quirky and different. She has an estimated net worth of $2.5 million.

Jenna Marbles has more than 16 million subscribers

Top Indian YouTubers

People from around the globe are earning gold from this phenomenon. Even back home there is a new generation of YouTube celebs who are earning well. Quite well. And they address a wide audience too.