

- Now you need to contact all the brands and companies you have listed and send them a sponsorship proposal. But you need to keep in mind that you cannot just edit the company name and send the same proposal to each one of them. Come up with a basic template for your proposal but customise it to each brand you are contacting, add specific points detailing how your channel will help their brand and what you are willing to do for them. This may include featuring or reviewing their products, shout outs, or an exclusive deal with their brand. You need to come up with reasons for the brand to sponsor you,
- Lastly, the sponsorship plan you send them should be detailed enough, explaining to them what you they can expect from you and what you expect from them in return. And make sure all these points are clear. A good sponsorship plan not only shows you the effort you have put in, but will also form the basis of the sponsorship deals you bag

Sponsorships are, without doubt, one of the best ways to generate high revenue from your YouTube channel. But you need a good subscriber base, and make videos with relevant content before approaching brands for sponsorship deals. So first focus on increasing your reach and then start contacting these companies. Also, always disclose what content is sponsored and what is not to your audience. Not only is this the right thing to do, but also will make your viewers appreciate and trust you more. And contrary to popular perception, doing a few sponsored videos won't make your viewers run away from your channel screaming 'Sellout'.
