

the products. The company later cut funding and forced Linus to set up his own venture. This venture then led to the creation of the Linus Media Group and established Linus Tech Tips. The content is mainly focused on computer components and building PCs. He has several hundred reviews and demonstrations of various computer components. He is best known for his tutorials on building a PC and his videos are some of the most viewed for new PC builders.

Science

Minute Physics

Minute Physics aims to solve the problem of diminishing attention spans of the audience today. They have a unique model of explaining simple concepts in physics such as “Why the solar system is flat?” by using drawings and illustrations in just a few minutes. This allows for the creation of byte-sized content, which can be easily consumed by audiences and doesn't need the audience to remain glued to the video for a long time. So if you want to learn a quick physics concept, this is the channel for you.