

MP3 Players were pretty common at one point

Now to think of the iPod's future, another gadget from the Apple family itself, is being considered as the alternate to the music streaming device – the Apple Watch. However, way more expensive than iPods, the Apple Watch is a technologically advanced sibling of the iPod. The Apple Watch was not introduced as a music streaming device, but it does the job just fine.

If Apple was to look into its own line-up of devices to make up for the fading away of iPod, it would probably update the Watch rather than a fading line.

The iPod however, is bound to hold a special place in the hearts of an entire generation, whose fascination with technology was enkindled through the iPod. At the time it was introduced, the iPod was a revolution in itself, which also elevated the larger value of the company.

While some may call the iPod obsolete, redundant, it will indeed be iconic for many. d