

Google's offerings are now mostly limited to consumer products, while projects like Waymo, DeepMind and X Labs becoming independent subsidiaries of parent company Alphabet scrutinising Google at, a simple look at future projects and investments that Google has announced or the patents it has applied for at the moment shows you that the company aims to bring every single aspect of our lives into the future; be it with global scale projects like Project Loon or forward looking technology like the Google Glass. What remains to be seen is if Alphabet (and as a result, Google) holds true to their motto of 'Do the right thing'. Because if it doesn't, in an AI powered future, it wouldn't take long for us to wish that we'd Googled a bit less (<http://dgit.in/GglSkynt1>). d
