

Google Home

Ok Google launch the article.

A mazon's Echo had left the world confused. On one hand the AI wasn't as resourceful as other options, but on the other hand the concept of a central AI unit did sound tantalizing. Two years later Google joined the gang with its Google Home product. Essentially, both are speakers connected to an AI system and have a built in microphone, that can hear from a very wide area. Although Google Home did come with something that Echo didn't, the new Google assistant. Assistant was the shining knight of Home. The AI system by Google, was far more capable and interactive than any AI systems. Which in turn meant that Home would become a far more useful product.

Device Line-up

As of the writing of this article, Google only has one product under the smart speaker category. Home is a jar-sized cylindrical device with four LEDs on
