A look at Google's wireless solutions for connectivity

While this isn't as exactly available in India, much to our never ending dismay, Google does offer two wireless connectivity solutions – Google Fiber and Project Fi – for broadband internet and cellular respectively. We all know how much Google likes setting examples of what it thinks a particular thing should be, as sort of a reference guideline so that other companies can follow. The best example for these would be the Nexus phone line. By providing a reference device using top drawer hardware and the best, latest and greatest of Android, Google showed the world what an Android phone could truly be. That's sort of the goal they are trying to accomplish here with these two
