

just end at trying to make money using one talent. Similar to any other enterprise, it is a business which demands investment.

A freelancer needs to put in money to make some of it through the service he or she provides. For example, a freelance photographer cannot do her work without quality equipment like a good DSLR camera or telephoto lens. However, her investment in her photography business simply doesn't end there. Being in a creative field, she will have to network, market herself and keep up with the latest trends and technology. She will have to learn new skills and styles of photography to make sure she stays in the game.

Talent without skill is like a desert without an oasis

Freelancing requires one to gain prowess over multiple trades. It doesn't just boil down to one singular skill. A freelance content writer also needs to have a basic-know how of digital marketing in order to make sure their content reaches out to maximum people and boost readership. A freelance User Experience (UX) Designer needs to have know-how of psychology before creating his designs. Additionally, every freelancer must know the fundamentals of finance management, accounting, and the legalities involved in his field along with his soft skills.

As a freelancer, you will be your own HR, accounting, sales, marketing, business strategist and personal assistant. You have to adapt to multiple roles. Therefore, gaining command over your secondary set of skills should also be a priority. A freelancer needs to be able to dabble into everything while maintaining mastery over one talent.

In case this seems overwhelming, fret not. There are several ways a freelancer can enhance their professional skills and acquire new ones while working. There are multiple methods and platforms available which can come to your rescue. Here are a few platforms where you can brush up your skills and acquire new ones:

Coursera:

Coursera is the ultimate hub for knowledge on the internet. From short courses on language to an MBA in finance, Coursera has the world's best professors under its vast umbrella.

While some courses are free, you will need to pay if you want a certificate. It is the perfect distance learning centre for a freelancer.

Similar to Coursera, Alison has over a 1000 courses from the top universities from all over the world. You can learn everything from the