

is sharing actionable knowledge that best covers the topic. Obviously, he doesn't have enough experience to write about writing. After a few (too many) hours lost in consideration of the form of 'best', he has a rough idea and starts with the searches. Soon he has enough tabs open that the titles aren't visible. After getting through all of them and taking appropriate notes, he sits to write in a new window (with an extra tab or two, for the times when the right words don't flow to the fingertips). A few cups of coffee later, the first draft is ready. Unsatisfied, he puts in a time gap before getting back to it the next day with fresh eyes. At times, he's embarrassed to accept author-

A general framework for improvement ship of his work, but then reconsiders it as a chance to improve. Another couple of hours later he is still unsatisfied, but the deadline is approaching and so he sends this chapter in.

Stepping up your game

Of course, every individual's story is unique, yet there are common themes to be found in life. For those who have started, all that remains is to improve. The aim is to optimise your income for the time and effort you put into it. The two immediately apparent methods are charging more and writing more. There are limits to your time, and if you spend all your time earning money, the whole point of earning would be defeated. Money is merely an enabler. Therefore, after a certain point, the only course of action is to charge