

Building your portfolio

This is the first step to a long journey.
Show them what you are made of and why they should they hire you

So you have taken the plunge and decided to be a freelancer? Good, strap in for now begins the hard part. The first question is how to get freelancing gigs. If you were to hunt for a job, what would you do? The first step would be to create your resume and then send it out hoping to get an interview. In the world of freelancing, we call it a portfolio. It's a showcase of your work intended for potential clients to get an idea of your skills. The portfolio shows your strengths, establishes your credentials and gives the client an idea of your skills. It may be the first interaction between you and your client and most
