

their social media timelines too. Nothing works better than ‘word of mouth’ or in this case ‘click of the button’ publicity. If people are talking about your content, your channel is more likely to do well.

Take for instance the case of ‘Dhinchak Pooja’. Her YouTube channel has over 3 lakh subscribers and her latest video titled ‘Aafreen Fathima Bewafa Hai’ has over 22 lakh views. While she has consistently received a lot of flak for the kind of music she chooses to make, one thing is for sure – the woman rakes in the moolah. Her recent entry into the Big Boss home is proof of her ever growing popularity. The bottom line - get people to talk about your content and it will definitely get you places, plus it will help earn the big bucks.

Be consistent:

If you intend creating one video a week, your channel will have followers but it's unlikely that they will come back every week to interact with your

Create an interesting, captivating YouTube page to gather your audience and keep them hooked