

Surveys, tests and reviews

Companies need to do research, often just to keep up with the competition. Often, they need ordinary people, like you for this. And they're happy to pay you for your time.

Let's clear one thing up at the outset. Survey-monkeying is probably the least fun way to make money at home. It's that weird category of hard work that isn't particularly hard, but is just mind-numbingly boring, needs to be done for hours and hours to produce any noticeable results, and offers little variety, day after day after day. If your goal is to make a quick easy buck, and then to make a tonne of
