

Pictured: Not you

Is there anything like this, but less terrible?

Less terrible? Not exactly. Better paying, sure, but those are harder to find. Many biology and psychology labs, social science researchers and drug companies are constantly on the lookout for human test subjects. They will pay well for you to be a part of their studies, in various capacities

This may sound scary, and sure, sometimes it is. But you can make good money testing FDA ‘approved’ anti-depressants, answering questions about stress, or sometimes, even selling your poop (we s#@$ you not, read all about it)

This is starting to sound a little shady...

You’re absolutely right, and it is a testament to the sleaze-filled hypercapitalist stench of the 21st century. These surveys make money off knowing as
