

something you should ask yourself. Do you remember those memories of your birthdays when your parents took you to the two storeyed toy shop? Your eyes gleamed with such joy, didn't they? Yeah, err no! People have traded that experience of store shopping with convenience of the virtual shopping world.

Stocking inventory and storage

You craft, therefore you hoard

A home run business does not require an aesthetic set up for display and viewing for consumers and buyers to browse through. All it requires is a good virtual set up for marketing your wares along with a good space to stock current inventory. If your home is ill equipped to hold stock of products and goods, a storage unit can be set up and run from remote industrial estates that provide with warehousing options with cheap labour. These set ups usually run themselves once the initial teething troubles have been overcome and require only seldom visits by the business owner who is working comfortably from their air-conditioned lounge and cosy couches. To be fair, this can also be done from your hotel room, a café or an airport.

Storage costs in a store set up come at a premium as most of them are located in up market areas. Every square inch in such locations has to immediately convert itself into a nonstop revenue generating machine. This can
