

people to run errands? If you answered in the positive to the questions above, couch run business ideas may be ideal for you.

A home run business can quite often be single-handedly operated or decisions and operations can be executed by its owner and partners along with a robust set up of shipping and inventory control teams. These support services for a home run business can be contractors or sub-contractors with no liability to the company. Most sales run like a well oiled machine with no requirements for organic salespersons coming up a performance monkey act to cajole their customers. Software in the virtual world does this for you and guess what? This software doesn't need a pension fund, a medical cover, paid holidays or a business travel credit card.

Advertising and marketing

Advertising is the wonder in wonder bread - Jef Richards, Advertising Professor

When advertising and marketing for products online, it's often the case that your customer is looking at the viability of the online portal and the verification of your authenticity that the virtual space provides to them on you. These include reviews and ratings of previous customers and the experience

The key to more business and repeat business is to get current customers to vouch for you you have provided historically. The marketing of online products can be kept to a minimum and your past success will speak for itself. A number of well taken and edited product photographs, high quality product catalogues and descriptions will be a selling point good enough to attract a buyer. Since an average online buyer is surer of what they are looking for and oftentimes have already made up their mind. An example of this would be a customer looking for very specific keywords like green pillar apple scented candle.

The spending power of the online buyer cannot be underestimated. Today, everyone is a mental gymnast looking to gratify their needs whilst lying in bed, playing on their media devices battling falling asleep. How