

Fashion accessories

Adjacent to apparels, we should also mention fashion accessories that are very much in demand. Some of the hottest selling in this category include bags, wallets and purses, watches, cell phone covers and travel accessories.

Mobile phones

The running joke is that next to air, mobile phones are the most ubiquitous thing on earth. And Indians are lapping up cell phones like there's no tomorrow. As you probably know, the varieties of brands and models of phones available in the Indian market is practically endless.

Mobile phones – People just can't get enough of it!

Books

For all the rants against people not reading enough these days, books still remain a surprisingly high selling category online.

A Google India study on online market trends in India shows that books were the third largest selling categories after apparels and consumer electronics, contributing to 15% of the total online sales in the country.

You might need to check out retailers like Amazon to see which are the most selling titles in their catalogue to get an idea of what kind of books you should stock.

Consumer electronics

While mobile phones merit a separate mention, it doesn't mean that phones are the only thing in the electronics category that sell well.