

would be a large number of sellers selling the same or similar product as you, especially for a popular product category. All it would take for people to choose another seller over you is a better price.

4. High commission rates

Depending on the platform, retailers would charge different fee as commission against each product that you sell through them. More often than not, these commissions would be what you may call 'hefty.'

Certain shopping channels make you pay for every click that your product attracts on the site, regardless of whether the click results in a sale or not, while others charge based on the category. So you need to find a sweet price point where the commissions don't kill you and you don't lose customers either.

Starting your own personal site

Broadly, the biggest advantages include getting more control over design and marketing of your shop while the disadvantages include building the brand from the ground up and lack of support mechanisms like a merchants' community.

Places to sell online

Below is given a list of spaces online where you could sell your products both domestically and internationally.

General Products

Alibaba

Indian exporters can list their products on China-based Alibaba for selling in the international market. You can sign up for free to become a member. or opt for the Gold Supplier Membership. This would help you gain more credibility and visibility from the consumer's point of view, along with a detailed company profile. Also, listing the highest number of products to be displayed on the site is also a good tactic to garner customers. You also have the option to create a mini site of your own.

The Chinese giant that opens a window to a global audience