

Snapdeal

You could sell both new and used products on Snapdeal. No listing fee is involved and the commission is around 15 percent of the product price.

Specialised products

Etsy

With a customer base of more than 24 million across the world, Etsy is a great option – only if you're selling what's allowed on the platform, like handmade goods manufactured by the seller, vintage products – referring to items that are 20 years old or more, and craft products like fabric yardage.

Once the shop is up, you should choose the language for the shop, the country and also the currency in which you would list your prices. Indian sellers can accept PayPal payments.

Over 2.4 million
customers

Pepperfry

On this platform, you could sell home products including home décor, furnishings, appliances, furniture and kitchen and dining lamps.

Myntra

Through Myntra, you could sell footwear, apparel, beauty and cosmetics products, and also fashion accessories. You could submit a proposal to them. After reviewing it, Myntra would get in touch with you.

Droom

Droom is a mobile marketplace where you could sell automobiles. The transactions are transparent and reliable, and you could sell either as an individual or a professional sales entity.

Artworks

SaffronArt

SaffronArt is said to be the biggest online space to sell artworks in the subcontinent. Taking a leaf out of many brick and mortar art sellers, SaffronArt sells products on auction. The competition is tough though, since the platform boasts artwork from a wide array of artists including folk