

have their own warehouse for fulfilment. Hence, it is the prime responsibility of the seller to ship the item and interact with the customers. Along with the product, you can include a leaflet with basic instructions and contact information.

You should also contact the buyer after few days to verify whether they have any queries. This will help you to retain old customers. The disadvantage of eBay is the difficulty to handle returns. Normally, buyers would have to contact the seller and wait for their reply. In case you are selling refurbished items with seller warranty, you have to render excellent after-sales service. Otherwise, you will receive negative feedback, which will harm your online business. You will have to probably arrange courier pickup from the buyer's location instead of asking buyers to ship heavy goods on their own. If the product is an unbranded accessory sellers should properly deal with the buyers in case they have queries after a purchase. Unlike Amazon, ebay only provides live chat assistance between 10AM to 6PM. However, telephone support is available between 9.30AM to 7.30PM and email may take up to 48 hours to respond.

Here's how you can establish contact with ebay team