

you're selling data cables via Amazon, you could email the customer three weeks after delivery to get feedback. Throw in special offers via social media platforms with relevant hashtags. Encourage other people to amplify the post or tweet with the hashtag. Maintain a mailing list and inform customers with stunning and unbeatable offers regularly.

If you are direct seller and run your own e-commerce platform, you can ask buyers to post reviews and issue coupons or points. If you look at Chinese based Banggood, the company provides points for each review, image and video. This will ensure that customers will return back to them after a while instead of approaching a competitor.

If a customer establishes contact with you after purchase, you should use terms and jargon that is understandable to them. If you employ delivery boys, show them some gratitude by providing them with discount coupons. It is necessary to maintain good relationship with staff to grow your business. You need to implement shift system to give adequate rest to your employees. To attract customers, you can send free samples to existing loyal buyers and ask them to review the product. You can also run special campaigns and contests on Facebook and Twitter with trending hashtags where the winners would be provided with coupon codes and huge discounts.

Annual Service Contracts

Nowadays, a lot of importance is being given to annual service contracts for electronic products. It helps customers save money for spare parts after the expiry of the warranty period. Nowadays, e-commerce giants such as Flipkart and Amazon provide a facility to purchase extended warranty at the time of purchase. As part of the deal, buyers will pay a fixed amount and the warranty will be extended automatically. If you are selling directly, you should contact the buyer before two months of warranty expiration and advise them with the steps required to extend the warranty. This is because manufacturers will not provide extension for out of warranty products. Buyers won't be aware of these rules and will end up paying more for an electronic product if it fails after the warranty period. As a seller, you should show good responsibility by establishing contact with buyers even after one year with proper advise regarding the usefulness of service contracts.

Call centres

Online sellers can establish partnerships with call centre companies to provide 24 hours customer service without employing any staff. However,