

Warehousing

The cost of real estate is a high deterrent to have your own warehouse. Fret not, there is an alternative

Picture this - You walk into your friend's apartment. You are there after ages. You can remember vaguely what the setting was like 10 years ago. That little wooden cupboard that stood in the corner is no longer there. A computer table has raked up that space instead. The dining table is gone. It has been replaced by a larger seating area that can accommodate 2-to-3 laptops. The wardrobe is still there. You open it, and witness a zillion baby carriers in all their glory. The colours hit you. The fabrics are amazing. But why are they here?

"I've turned my home into a home office", says your friend. She has become a name to reckon with in the baby-carrier industry. The home is now the new office. And by the looks of it, she needs a new office.
