

your assets liquid by letting fulfilment warehouses do their job while you keep making money regardless of the seasons.

- You are seeing growth in your company and its coming fast and in bursts. This would mean you keep outgrowing your infrastructure faster than you can adapt. You cannot keep putting money down on larger warehouses with every passing quarter. An existing third party warehouse can help you expand without any of these worries. You can lease out extra space as your company grows.

Fringe benefits of fulfilment warehouses:

- Your fulfilment process is now the simplest it has ever been. Your only concern with warehousing is ensuring that your logistics partner has enough inventory. As far as they are well stocked, there is little else that you will need to worry about.

Custom packaging is a great way to ensure that your product and brand are well received by the customer. Making these custom packagings is a different ball game altogether- and not an easy one at that.

- Dealing with returned goods is usually easy with most fulfilment warehouses. They will handle returned items by checking them for damages, if any, incurred during the shipping process. If items are good enough for use, they will be returned to the inventory and be used for future deliveries.