

on websites is another option but a more expensive one at that. You could, however, indulge in a little barter system of your own as far as this option is concerned. If your home business is that of selling sports apparel for kids, advertising on a sports apparel brand website will make zero sense since they are your direct competitors. You could though try and connect with a sports academy for kids and try and advertise your products on their website. The symbiotic relationship will be beneficial to both parties. You could, in turn, endorse them by carrying their ads on your website. Win win situation for everyone involved.

Video content is king:

Video is powerful. Images and moving ones at that are more likely to remain in your system much longer after they have been viewed. Use that to your advantage. Create video content and upload it to sites like YouTube and Vimeo. Ensure that you add fresh content every 3-to-7 days and stay alert to any comments on your videos. Be available to interact with your visitors and have responses ready in case any of them have questions for you. And most importantly remember that haters are going to hate. All videos on YouTube

Selling overseas may seem glamorous but selling locally is the low hanging fruit that you should pluck first
