

You heard it right, search engines are fussy creatures!

Conclusion

All of us are website users, how many of are web developers? When surfing the web, we take several things for granted for e.g. sending feedback form emails, revisiting our browser history to find the name of that article that evades our minds etc. If you are layman, this article, hopefully, has given an intriguing insight into how things work and how web developers take care of the nitty gritty for us to have a smooth browsing experience. If you are a budding web developer looking to understand more about sessions, sending emails, configuration and using custom domains, this article would definitely get a much better grasp of the topics and should be able to execute basic commands.
