

Prototype Mode

This mode allows you to link objects to artboards in order to incorporate basic interactions.

The first artboard that you created would have a house symbol on the upper left corner, this means that's where the prototype would start from, it's the Home. Selecting any other artboard provides a similar button that allows for making the selected artboard as the new Home.

Selecting an object makes an arrow button appear on the right side. Clicking on the arrow opens a menu to define the operations of the selected object. Target lets you define the artboard where the user would be taken to when they press the object in question. Transition decides the type of animation that would take place to move to the new artboard. Easing decides the Prototype Mode lets you quickly link buttons to pages and also govern the transition.
