

CHAPTER #9

Feedback and Exporting

Sharing your project and getting quick feedback is one of XD's key features.

Adobe XD is a popular user experience prototyping software tool with support for vector design, wireframing including creation of simple interactive prototypes. Imagine, you are working with a group of 10 team members. The entire project should be shared across your group so that members can express their feedback and opinion. Moreover, it is also possible to make changes in real time and the modifications will be reflected across all members. You can perform the required feedback and reporting activities from within Adobe XD. The final prototype or design specification can be exported in a shareable link format when all members agree to the design and code. In this chapter, we
