

Google Analytics
Anywhere. Anytime.

Introducing Google Analytics

Exploring the ‘what’ and ‘why’ of Google Analytics and how you can use it for your business

For any business, data is the most important asset it can own. And no data is more important than consumer data. Sun Tzu, the famous Chinese general and peerless strategist said in his book, “Know your enemy”. It was and remains the most important mantra of any warfare, be it on the battlefield or in the boardroom. Translated into business growth, the most important mantra is “Know Your Customer”. What do they like? Where do they go? What motivates them? What do they buy and where and how? These are all pertinent questions to understanding
