

It's unique perks lie in saving up to 5% on credit cards, and flexible return policy makes getting a refund easy.

The site also offers free shipping when you spend $25 or more on furniture

If you're a book lover and an Amazon shopper looking to stock up on great reads, Barnes & Noble is a great alternative.

Barnes & Nobles advertises itself as the Internet's largest book-store, filled with books ready to be speedily delivered to your door. It's a good place for Amazon customers who are avid readers.

The website's best selling points are free shipping on orders over $25 and 14-day returns with loyalty program available for extra savings.

And how about Walmart? As Walmart's online presence grows, so does the variety and selection of products. With the same great rollback prices as in stores, you're sure to find a great deal.

Walmart is famous as a superstore that has super low, low prices. Shop the immense inventory online and have it shipped straight to your door. You can even pick up some orders on the same day at your local store.

Several of its features include the availability of price matching, free 2-day shipping on orders over $35. Loyal Walmart shoppers take note:- the Red Card offers a 3-2-1 Save rewards program, with three tiers of savings depending on what you buy.

Although AliExpress may be lesser known to common buyers, it is one of the largest online supermarkets in the world. Guess what? It has everything and more.

Businesses turn to AliExpress to buy material and products in bulk directly from the manufacturer or supplier. In other words, if you're a businessman, then this is the best place to build your business. If not, you can still find great deals as an individual purchaser.

The website offers delivery worldwide with $4 off any order for new customers as well as 30% off on fashion due to musical festival trends.