

Shop and save

The advent of e-commerce sites has made it extremely convenient to shop. You have access to a myriad of websites to shop from and the choices within each category and sub-category of products is a consumer's dream come true. This has obviously made things cheaper because you get to see and compare a vast number of products within a short period of time. Also, with more e-commerce players entering the market every month, the competition has intensified much to our delight. So you'd be right to assume that you're saving money with each and every transaction. However, did you know that you can save a lot more by keeping a few things in mind?

There's a massive sale or two every month on all the major e-commerce platforms, so buying at any other time is an unwise course of action. However, should you have no choice, then we do have a few tricks up our sleeves that will ensure that you save some money on your purchase. Sometimes, there are instances when you will not find what you need on Indian e-commerce stores. At such times, you will have to look at overseas stores which deliver to India in a timely manner. To make things convenient for you, we've listed all such stores which deliver to India and have also included a chapter on understanding the entire process of importing. Most stores handle shipping without any hiccups but should anything go wrong, we've got you covered.

When shopping online in India, there are two phenomena which are very common – EMI and Flash Sales. Practically everyone who has shopped online has experienced the horrors of flash sales and how difficult it is to
