

The big players

Amazon

Since it was established in 1996, Amazon.com has become the go-to online retailer for nearly anything, from books, toys, garments and shoes, furniture, family products, and more. Its Prime subscription offers free two-day dispatching on most buys, and also offers the capacity to stream music, motion pictures, and other media, in addition different advantages. The Amazon site gets traffic of around 1.87 billion visits each month. Amazon's Indian subsidiary is one of the biggest e-commerce players in the country.

Ebay

Established in 1998, Ebay.com is an online platform that enables individuals to purchase and offer new and utilised things. The organisation's ongoing Price Match Guarantee guarantees that clients are getting the best prices on the vast majority of things available on eBay Deals. The eBay site gets traffic of around 817.6 million visits each month.

Flipkart

Flipkart was founded by Sachin Bansal and Binny Bansal as recently as 2007. The company initially dealt with only book sales before expanding to other product categories. As of 2017, Flipkart held a market share of 39.5% in India's e-commerce industry, making it one of the biggest e-commerce players in the country along with Amazon's Indian subsidiary. U.S.-based retail chain Walmart, in 2018, acquired a 77% controlling stake in Flipkart for $16 billion USD.

Snapdeal

Snapdeal was started in 2010 by Kunal Bahl and Rohit Bansal as a daily deals platform. The following year, it would expand to become an online marketplace. The Delhi-based e-commerce company is one of the biggest in India, alongside the Indian subsidiary of Amazon and Flipkart.

Walmart

Since the first Walmart store opened in 1962, the retail mammoth has been known to offer low costs alongside incredible service. The organisation took that experience online in 2000 when it launched Walmart.com in the U.S. Nowadays, the Walmart site gets roughly 339 million visitors a month.