Time to get your hands dirty! Let's see how we can edit an image to suit our needs and tell the narrative

So you have heard of the adage “A picture is worth a thousand words”. You can tell a whole story from just one image. But what is the story? What do the viewers understand? Is your narrative getting through to them? For that, you need to edit your image and make sure that the viewer “hears” your “words”. This is the first DIY chapter in this FT and has been written in a verbose manner. The next DIY chapters will be shorter and the onus will be on your to take a creative approach. With that said, let's take a look at this picture and see how we can convey the narrative in a better manner.

Here we have two women engaged in conversation, one working, one looking. And a third one just eavesdropping or thinking about something.
