BuddiBrief Description:

Buddi is a personal finance and budgeting program which has been developed targeting the users who have little financial backgrounds or none and need a simple, user friendly application to help them to manage their finances. Buddi is released as open-source software which can be downloaded by any one for free without any restrictions on using all the features and options available in the application. This is an attempt to turn terms and jargon which are complicated, in terms of finance, into as simple as possible while retaining all advanced functions. Buddi will run on any computer which has a Java virtual machine installed on it and supports all popular operating systems like windows, Mac OS X, Linux etc.

Why you must get it:

This application is available in different languages which lets the user handle this app in the language that they are proficient at. There is an option available for translating into another language as well. This app is one of the easiest personal finance tools. This has features of both - budgeting tools as well as reporting tools. This interface has an option for budget categorisation in income and expenses and keeps track of every operation that happens inside the app as a record of transaction. It supports four types of credit accounts such as cash, checking, investment and savings
