

51

DrupalBrief Description:

Drupal is an open-source software which is used by individuals as well as groups. A person deficient in technical skills can also use this software and create and manage different types of websites. The application lets you manage content and develop the framework of a website. Drupal was written in PHP language of programming. It supports authorisation of content in a collaborative manner like podcasts, newsletters and image galleries. The app can be downloaded via a web-based installer along with add-on modules.

Why you must get it:

Drupal software is useful for bloggers, personal website owners, company websites, portals, e-commerce sites, internet resource directories and social networking sites. Since it is open-source, it is highly customisable. Apart from this, the software is perfect for companies and developers who want to create a website with useful features. It gives you high quality at a low cost. The website created in Drupal will cater to the needs and requirements of its clients. In order words, companies will get vital and innovative websites with Drupal which will help them attract clients.

52

JoomlaBrief Description:

Joomla is an open-source software for content management systems. It helps in building the most powerful, dynamic websites and applications. It has a spontaneous interface which will help users utilise its features to the core.

Joomla uses MVC or Model-View-Controller design of architecture. According to the pattern of the MVC which Joomla request, it will analyse URLs in order to evaluate where the component has processed the request. The model has