

OroCRM

Brief Description:

OroCRM is a great open-source application in the area of customer relationship management. This allows the software to use various channels in a multiple ways. It also helps in organising the sales pipeline, account management, communicating with the customers, market campaigns and also tracks the performance of the campaign it runs. The software works successfully to be unique in the business and provides vast customising options to the users. This application could be adopted in the retail, finance, e-commerce and can be effectively deployed in many industries. The installation package is very easy and can be enabled with a simple configuration process.

Why you must get it:

OroCRM helps in enhancing the customer relationship by building relations and trying to trace out all areas to enhance the sales. The flexible option can leverage the data according to the team's needs. Sales team could monitor the customers so that they can easily track business prospects. Sales pipeline can accurately forecast the customer's moves. Marketing groups could be built by zeroing in on the geographic location, customer kinds and many more related areas. It provides customer information in a single view so that the client facing teams would be prepared to meet the customers at any time. The team has designed this software in such a way that the company not only just has CRM but they need the CRM.

EspoCRM

Brief Description:

EspoCRM is an open-source web application which allow the users to view, type and evaluate all the relationships of the company. Once you install the software you can store all the data possible in the server. The main responsibility of the users would be to maintain the server, and enable the data security. Once you have planned to use the cloud hosting nature the installation, the configuration would be available if you have the updated version of this software.

Why you must get it:

EspoCRM excels at business process automation and operational analysis. This is a great platform for the innovative business and based on the inputs you arrive at, you can successfully execute the sales activities. You can be assured