Instagram stories are a unique feature in an Instagram profile. In contrast to your posts, your stories come and go 24 hours after you add them at the top of your profile. You can use your stories as live recording, as recorded current happenings or moments, as polls, as question and answer sessions, as story-telling features. Your followers often would love to know you personally, and you can show momentous events by recording snippets of your life, which you do not want to be a post. Stories set your current mood or your recent memories, and your follower gets to feel what you are experiencing. You can also use your stories for immediate responses, where the user answers your polls, replies instantly to your questions and uses likes options as much as possible. The story feature can be also used as a series of stories that you want to tell or share with your followers. Single events or a series of events can be shown through your stories. For instance, as a fitness blogger, you want to express your newfound happiness at having discovered a fitness resort. Through your stories, you live record or record your current moods and happenings to immediately connect with your followers.

Scheduling & Reposting

Scheduling helps you stay updated and regular in connecting with your followers. Consistency is crucial for your Instagram profile. Your followers expect you to be regular. Scheduling your posts is a way to keep yourself regular irrespective of whether you are online or not. It is not always possible to be available constantly, and the scheduling feature, once set up, brings benefits for your sake and keeps your followers entertained and satisfied. Scheduling has the following benefits:

- This feature uses the time you have set in advance to post on your behalf. You can also have reminders to help you decide on the time the Instagram posts on your behalf.
- The second benefit is posting a lot of posts at a same time helps your reputation as being regularly consistent. If the profile is a business one, the professional look is enhanced by the professional punctuality.
- The scheduling feature encourages engagement and success of the profile, with followers and visitors increasing with every regular post.

Reposting is posting a public post to share with your followers, and if the post is private, you repost it with permission. In other words, you are sharing a post on Instagram by reposting it along with credits given to the original
