

Ethics of the platform

Social media is a platform that enables communication, interaction, connecting on mutual interests, reaching out in the form of discussions, sending messages and friendship requests or following and unfollowing people, and even reporting elements of discord. Social media is used for professional, personal and commercial actions and activities. It is definitely important to know and understand how, why, where and when a particular use of a social medium is considered as inappropriate, thus constituting an ethical violation. Several examples of inappropriate actions include posting intimate details about people without their consent, misrepresenting to the public about self or products and services for unlawful or unethical purposes,
