

Becoming a social media wizard

Very few products are so good that you don't have to spend any time, effort or money towards marketing them. For the vast majority of the products, marketing is very important. Especially when there is competition in the segment, then your marketing budget has to keep up with your business competition. The rules of marketing could have been said to be set in stone but that's no longer the case. With the advent of multiple social media channels, the marketing domain has become ever so more dynamic than before. You can now run impactful campaigns for a lot less if you understand the nuances that each social media platform has to offer. Twitter, Instagram, Facebook, SnapChat and every other social media platform plays out differently in each country. Moreover, the audience profile keeps changing as well.

Just two years ago, Facebook would have been the right place to expose your ideas to practically every age group except the mature audience. Come 2019 and things have changed radically, now Facebook is the go to place for a mature audience and the youth are more active on YouTube, Instagram and SnapChat. This is not to say that you can't find the youth on Facebook anymore but that they're less likely to open Facebook in a day compared to YouTube or Instagram. If you had to pick one single platform to spend
