

Posting the right content on LinkedIn

LinkedIn allows showcasing your profile. One of the best ways is posting useful and actionable status updates that may include relevant images and links to the content of your website or any other websites. Status updates on a regular basis keep your connections updated about your recent activities. If you want to get exposure and wants to establish yourself as a thought leader in the LinkedIn community, posting articles is the best way to achieve this. If you have uploaded videos to YouTube or posted slide presentations to SlideShare, you can display them in your LinkedIn profile as well. At times, you need recommendations to highlight your expertise and experience to enhance the visibility. LinkedIn provides a very convenient way to request recommendations from your connections. You can post your successful projects in your profile as well. Listing your skills and proficiency on your profile definitely helps others recognize your strengths. You can showcase publications that have presented your work. Moreover, you can list the organizations you support and causes you care about outside of your work. All your certifications, languages known, awards, and significant accomplishments can be showcased in your profile for your connections to see. You can also share your interests in terms of the groups you belong to and the companies that you are intended to know more about.
